THE SOUTH CHALLENGE

Many times since the campaign for president started we have been told that the solid south would be broken this year. More times, in fact than during the Harding-Cox campaign of 1920, when it was believed that the sur of the war, which had taken so many young southerners out of their isolation, would form the leaven that would bring the south politically as well as geographically and governmentally back into the Union.

But we will believe that one or more southern states have gone for Hoover when their electoral vote are so cast.

Texas, they say, is in a ferment. Florida due to the influx of norteherners is of a mind to go republi-The religious issues are reported to be boiling in Georgia. As proof of the supposed relaxation cottlong political habit we have polis showing that some southern states are edging toward the republican the showing of this house dress

But we have a notion that Mr. Hoover is going to have to depend on other states for his election. The habit of not one but several lifetimes is not so easily broken, and while some who do not approve of Smith will refrain from voting, there is so little republican machinery in the south that the party can hope for little or no improvement of its present! poverty there.

The only difference between the speech that Herbert Hoover made at Newark and that which Al Smith made at Omaha is that Hoover proved himself capable and constructive, while Smith proved himself incapable and destructive. Hoover knew all about his subject and Smith knew nothing about his subject.

As the Tammany leaders carry their flying banners into the country where the tall corn grows doubtless they are wondering whether the democratic voters still remember what William J. Bryan told em.

Of course these talking pictures of the political campaign are all right if not kept too long, but we can't think of anything more painful than the talking picture of a defeated candidate taken in October and shown again a few weeks after election.

"All I can do for Herbert Hoover as head of the women's division will not amount to two cents unless the women register and vote." Mrs. Hert could not ell the women of this country any more than she said in those few words.

What every woman wants: A chance to vote for Hooven They helped do the trick in Maine, and they will do just as much in every other state in November.

Joe Robinson, Democratic candidate for Vice-President, should stick to the facts. By doing so he would command more respect. Deliberately distorting facts is despicable, and nobody can defend it.

There is a lot of poetic talent going to waste. For instance, a young fellow the other day told us that he called his best girl his little ice cream cone because she was so sweet and cold.

The Russian reds have now opened the door and invited the capitalists to enter which reminds of the done about the spider and the poor little fly.

Maine is known as the Pine Tree State and this year there must be a republican behind every one of the trees.

Somebody wants to know what becomes of the old discarded straw hats every fall. We think they are made up into breakfast food.

What Shall 1 BEAUTY Wear?

Rough, reddened elbows are s ugly and yet many women who are otherwise well-groomed are carcless about them. It takes so tittle effort to keep the elbows as smooth and white as the rest the arm that it seems ridiculous to neglect them.

When you are massaging your ands with the skin food or lotion that you use take a few more secbows. In this way you can easily keep them as soft as your hands If they are in really bad condition soak them in warm olive oil nce or twice a week. Such details as this can easily

From all pre-game dope, Rich-mond was slated to win this contest but the Yellowjackets had improved wonderfully since their game with the Oakland Tech high. Joe Williams, flashy quarter-back, captained the Ricamond outfit for the day and made so the few gains chalked up by the local boys.

The Richmond team played good football but they were completely unable to withstand the Berkeley attacks—especially the new tackle play used by the Berkeley outfit for big gains.

Degnen, who played a brilliant game, and Fitzpatrick, were on the wing positions. Neckle and Jackon took the brunt of the attack at tackle positions; Rountree and Dunleavy showed their stuff at guard and Truitt held down started the game at halves: Williams was at quarter and Scar-scella started as fullback.
